

THE SILLY SONG

©Kath Bee 2008

I met a boy, and he wore pink pyjamas
He ate ripe bananas, he owned two big llamas
He liked riding on his llamas eating ripe bananas wearing pink pyjamas
That silly boy!

I met a girl, who on her feet wore flippers
On her hands wore slippers, didn't like nail clippers
So she wore the flippers and the slippers to avoid her nails being cut with clippers
That silly girl!

CHORUS

This is just a silly song, it might be right it might be wrong
It doesn't matter, just for fun. Why don't you try writing one?
A silly silly song. A silly song.

I knew a dog, he wore a tartan raincoat
Sailed a pale blue sailboat, with a friendly male goat
He would sail the sailboat with the male goat never taking off his tartan
raincoat
That silly dog!

I met a man and he had rubbish on his head Wore black gumboots to bed, and had a friend named Fred (if it weren't for ya gumboots where would ya be?) He'd spend the day with Fred then wear his black gumboots to bed and still have rubbish upon his head.

CHORUS

I know a lady; her clothes are made of lollipops
She never walks she hops, and she loves spinning tops
She spins her tops and hops and hops while children try to steal and eat
her clothes
Of lollipops.
